Paid For What He Got.

At twenty minutes to 9 the genial citizen, resident in fresh linen, sallied into the telephone booth. It was a hot day.

At fifteen minutes to 9 the somewhat less genial citizen in somewhat less fresh linen finally managed to attract the attention of the sweet voiced hello girl. It was, you will recall, a hot day.

At ten minutes to 9 a grouchy citizen in white linen got his party on the wire. It was hot.

At five minutes to 9 the wreck in question discovered that he had an entire stranger on the line. The day grew warmer.

At 9 o'clock the hello girl informed the dithering wreck that he must not use the telephone as a plaything. At a little after 9 there issued from the booth a dilapidated remnant who drew from his pocket a dollar bill and first squeezing from it the moisture it had collected, laid it on the druggist's counter.

"What's this?" inquired the haughty drug clerk.

"One Turkish bath, $1," said the wreck. "I pay for what I get."

Oh, the joys of modern civilization!—Boston Traveler.

RABID CANINE CAUSES ALARM

Dog Wearing Adams County Tax Tag Goes into Franklin County and Bites a Score of Dogs and Other Animals.

As a result of the visit of a mad dog from Adams county, the people of New Baltimore, Franklin county, are walking around armed with clubs and guns to protect themselves from rabid animals.

They have killed 17 of their dogs and would have killed two more had he canines not dodged the shots and raced off to the woods. All the trouble was caused by an Adams county dog with the rabies which ventured into the New Baltimore district last week and bit dogs by the wholesale.

In addition to attacking dogs the mad canine bit a hog owned by Mrs. William Butler and another belonging to Lewis Wagaman and calf on the premises of John Nangle. These have been penned up.

Levi Wagaman shot the dog. He did not believe it wise to open the door, so he thrust the gun through a window pane and sent a load of shot into the animal. A tag on it bore this inscription: Adams County Dog Tax 1909.

Immediately the slaughter of dogs bitten by the intruder was begun and 17 were killed. It is not known, however whether this represents the entire number bitten as the rabid dog may have been busy during the night.

CLEATS OFF TRACTION ENGINES

Notices have been posted in many of the counties of Maryland by the state roads commission warning the owners of traction engines that they must operate their machines over the new state highways that no damage will result to the surface.

With the opening of the wheat harvesting season the traction engine which is used to haul and operate threshing machines makes much use of the public roads in going from farm to farm to thresh out the grain. These machines are not only heavy but their wheels have on the outer surface large iron projections that serve as teeth to give them a hold on the surface of the road in climbing hills.

On the old stone pikes they can do little damage but on the macadamized surface of the new state roads they are very destructive. An order of the state roads commission directs that they shall be operated with a smooth tire and this is considered practicable in that there are no heavy grades on the new state roads.

Thus far the commission has received no complaint that its order has been ignored by the owners of traction engines or other farm machinery.

RAIN WELCOME BUT WANT MORE

Adams County Farmers Want Many and Heavy Rains to Help along Corn Crop. Town People Want Rain for Gardens and Grass.

"This is fine but we want more" said a well known Adams county farmer this morning when he came to town during the refreshing rain which started to fall during the early morning hours. "It is just what I have been looking for and we need a lot of it."

"People who have not watched the weather conditions closely in the county do not realize what some Adams county farmers are up against" he continued. "Who there have been a number of more or less heavy rains in some sections of the county others failed have been missed almost entirely and in certain townships there has been no moisture worth mentioning for several months. As a result everything is suffering."

"Even in the districts where there has been an occasional rainfall, corn and other crops need rain. The corn, of course is what is occupying the greater part of the farmers' attention at the present time. If heavy rains do not come soon the output of Adams county this summer will fall far below the average and the rains must come soon or they will be too late."

"I understand that in the lower end of the county it is necessary for many farmers to haul water for their stock and in some other portions the same condition exists."

While the country people want rain those in town are expressing the same desire not only for the sake of their rural friends but for their own good. Gardens and flower beds look sick. Grass plots have become parched and on all sides there is a cry for rain. The coming encampment will make travel burdensome in some portions if rain does not fall to lay the dust while the fields in which the guards are at camp will be most uninviting unless there is some moisture to relieve their parched condition.

HAGERSTOWN'S NEW HOTEL

The hotel will be run on the European plan and no liquors will be sold on the premises. All of the rooms can be made communicating and several are connected with private parlors. The kitchen contains all the latest and improved conveniences.

An important feature of the Dagmar is that the building is practically fire proof. Everything is concrete—even the floors and washboards. The only woodwork is that around the doors and windows.

The little boy improved steadily after contracting the disease until last Wednesday when there was a change for the worse and he grew steadily weaker. COUNTY NEWS NOTES

Adams county people are rapidly preparing for their enjoyable times of the late summer and early fall and already the accounts of numerous surprise parties are coming into this office. The country festivals which are always held in such large numbers are now in full swing and many happy evenings are being spent following the arduous work of the weeks of harvest.

Adams county is said to be acquiring an unusually large number of automobiles. The proportion of cars in the county with respect to the population is said to be almost larger than any other county in Pennsylvania. The number owned both in the towns and in the rural districts is steadily increasing. Three rural mail carriers in the county are now serving their patrons by means of their machines.

Harvest Home services are now being held in the various churches throughout the country. This annual festival of thanksgiving over the bountiful crops yielded during the season is always observed in Adams county.

A large number of county residents living west and south of Gettysburg will do the hauling at the coming National Guard encampment. In addition to these many others will sell produce and the benefit to be derived will be shared by many of the residents of this section.

BIG RATTLESNAKE CHARMS GIRL

Two-Year-Old Child Was Unable to Move.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 8.—Last week Mrs. Arthur Jackson, who lives in Laurel county, being attracted by the hearty laughter of her little two-year-old daughter, who was standing on the front porch, called her name, and as she received no reply from the little one, she rushed out to see what might be the attraction.

Mrs. Jackson was horrified to behold a large rattlesnake coiled upon the ground, with its head prolonged about the porch, gazing steadily at the little girl and furnishing that death-like music, its many rattles charming its little victim until she was unable to move a muscle.

90 MILLIONS CENSUS GUESS

Population Will Not Be Known Until October.

THE COST IS $15,000,000

Over 1800 Clerks Are Busy Compiling Returns From the Seventy Thousand Districts.

Washington, Aug. 8.—By the middle of October, but scarcely before, the people of the United States will know their own number, as revealed by the thirteenth census.

The figures will not be given out until the count is entirely completed and minutely verified, and by that time every man who "keeps tab" will know the total for himself, for the details for all such sub-divisions as states, cities and counties will have become known previously through the census office announcements.

Some think that Director Durand practically knows now the exact number of the population, but he declares "really and truly" that he does not. If so disposed, he could ascertain approximately the number of people somewhat in advance of his announcement to the public.

This could be done by means of the preliminary count of the schedules which is made necessary for the payment of the enumerators for their services. The enumerating districts for each supervisor's area are numbered, and it is intended that each of them should contain 100 names. As soon as these are received they are turned over to counters and a virtually active statement is thus made possible. Up to date the names in about 58,000 of the 70,000 districts have been counted.

Ninety Million Is Guess.

The process is moving forward rapidly, and when it is completed the population of the United States could be easily determined by footing up the totals arrived at. Mr. Durand is not having the figures totaled, and he says that it is his purpose not to do so. He is not curious as to the outcome of his work. Nor will he make a prediction as to what the result should be. It is known that the census officials generally fall in with the idea that there are about 90,000,000 people in the United States.

Between the census of 1890 and that of 1900 there was an increase of about 13,000,000, and only a slightly larger increase would now be necessary to bring the figure up to the 90,000,000 mark. This result is arrived at by a purely arithmetical calculation, and not by any compilation of the figures recently taken.

About 300 nimble fingered young men and women are engaged night and day in determining the figures which, when the final computation is made, will show the total population. All told, there are some 1800 clerks employed in the census office in the compilation of all the facts gathered by the recent census; but, while the greatest activity is directed toward the ascertainment of the population, there is still much doing in other directions. Indeed, a large number of those at work in the population division are engaged in classifying the facts relative to the sex, age, race and other conditions in connection with the people numbered. Also, there are many employed in the manufacturing, agricultural and mining branches.

The first announcements will cover only enumeration figures, and these will continue for the next two months and a half. The sociological and industrial figures will come later and will be announced as a rule in special bulletins prepared by the bureau itself.

So far about $6,000,000 have been expended upon it, and it is probable that the total cost will be about $15,000,000. Of this sum $12,000,000 has been appropriated by congress.

OIL TO SUPPLANT OIL

Steel Company Tries New Process For Economy in Heating.

Pottsville, Pa., Aug. 8.—The Eastern Steel company, which has the newest rolling mill plant in Pennsylvania, is about completing two new open hearth furnaces, which will add 160 tons more capacity, every heat to the four furnaces already in use having a joint production of 200 tons per heat.

In order to economize in the fuel cost an oil process is to be used in lieu of coal in heating the new furnaces. The experiment may revolutionize the fuel for rolling mill furnaces throughout the world.

TRAMP MILKS COW AND ROBS FARMER

"Nervy Nat" is Outdone by a Hobo Thief.

Caldwell, N. J., Aug. 8.—"Nervy Nat" has been outdone by a tramp thief in West Caldwell.

This individual, after spending the night in the barn of Lloyd K. Francisco, a farmer, one mile from the village, took advantage of Mr. Francisco's absence in a field, milked a fine cow, and after consuming five quarts of the milk from an iron pot, he also stole Mr. Francisco's waistcoat, in which was a gold watch and $61.

The thief then wandered out to the field where Francisco was at work and informed him that his wife had just been bitten by a snake and that he ought to hurry home. Francisco did so, and the man continued in the opposite direction with his booty.

When Mr. Francisco discovered his loss he, with two of his farm hands, started in pursuit with a pistol and whips, but all trace of the thief was lost.

CHICKENS GIVE BABIES ILLS

Infantile Paralysis Coincident With Malady Among Poultry.

Norristown, Pa., Aug. 8.—A three-year-old daughter of Frederick Preisler has died, and a baby boy is sick with infantile paralysis, while several chickens in the henry of the Preisler premises on Buttonwood street have had the disease and are recovering along with the baby.

The Preisler children had the chickens for pets, and the baby took sick on the day the girl died, at which time the chickens also began to sicken. The fowls have shown every symptom of the disease.

This makes four cases of the disease reported to the board of health in a few weeks, with two deaths.

Has Child's Plague.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Infantile paralysis has attacked another adult, the third case of its kind to be called to the attention of the health authorities within a week. The victim is a man more than forty years old. As yet the officials have not been able to ascertain the cause or cure.

Bank Cashier Shot.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 8.—W. A. C. Johnson, cashier of the Packers' National bank, of South Omaha, was shot and seriously wounded in the residence portion of the city. The shooting occurred near his home and is believed to have been the work of a hold-up man. The police report that nothing of value was taken from Mr. Johnson.

SEES VICTORY FOR DEMOCRATS

Judge Parker Says Insurgents Will Aid.

IS SURE OF NEXT CONGRESS

New York Judge Declares Demand For Downward Revision of the Tariff Will Sweep Democrats Into Control.

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 8.—Judge Alton B. Parker, of New York, who was here with his family on an automobile trip, was interviewed on national politics and the effect of the insurgent movement on the Republican and Democratic parties.

He was asked: "What do you think of the chances for the election of a Democrat for president at the next national election?"

"That is a subject that I don't care to discuss at this time. We Democrats ought to consider only the political events of this coming year."

Thinks Congress Will Be Democratic.

"But really it seems to me as if the Democrats couldn't help getting control of the next congress. In fact, it would surprise me much if they did not have a substantial majority. Of course, the Republicans will comment that is what the Democrats always say in August. Anyway, that seems to me to be the trend of sentiment."

"To what reason do you attribute the change?"

"Largely to the question of the tariff and the agitation regarding its revision," replied Judge Parker.

"I was in Washington soon after the call for the extra session of congress by President Taft, when it was proposed to take up the revision of the tariff. A member of the senate asked me what I really thought of the question of revision. Now, of course, it was the claim of the Republican party, after they had placed that plank in their national platform, which spoke of the revision of the tariff, that it didn't specify a downward revision. This was the claim that the senator made to me. He wanted to know whether his party would stand for a revision. Now you must understand that the Republicans hoped to get a 1 per cent revision on the average. In answer to his questions, I told the senator that I thought that if only our party had to be dealt with the matter might not cause any trouble, but that it would be the Republicans that would have to be regarded primarily. So it happened. The agitation over the question of what was intended by the word 'revision' has been the cause for the fight among the Republicans themselves. President Taft afterward said it was meant to be downward."

"Do you think the insurgent movement will help the Democrats, judge?"

"Yes, I believe the insurgents will aid the Democrats this year, but farther than that period I don't care to state. The Republican party failed to revise the tariff. The Republican insurgency was brought about by this very fact."

His Views of Insurgents.

"Insurgency," continued Judge Parker, "is a fight for control in the Republican party. How much its effects will be materially felt outside the party can only be seen later. If it continues to grow it will increase and become an especially effective and a broad movement in the end. It is significant, to say the least, when you see a man like United States Senator Cummins, of Iowa, who was chairman of the state convention, make such an attack as he did upon the revision of the tariff and the 'regulars,' as they are called. For years the Democratic speakers have been trying to educate the people of this country that there was need of a downward revision of the tariff, and the people must realize now that when the Republican party pledged itself to a revision by placing such a plank, and it said unequivocally, 'revision, in their platform, which event was of such importance that it necessitated the hurried calling together by President Taft of an extra session of congress, it must have been very important. Again, when the people see the Republicans now splitting up on account of a fight over the same matter, they must begin to think that the Democrats might have been right after all."

ONE DROWNS; TWO RESCUED ON LAKE

Gasoline Tank on Motor Boat Explodes.

Seranton, Pa., Aug. 8.—Charles Campbell, Walter O'Toole and John Hallman, of this city, went with the Choctaw club to Lake Winola to tent out for a week.

There was a ball at a neighboring hotel, and the three youths went to the place in their motor boat. They remained until after 2 a. m. Shortly before 3 o'clock the three entered their motor boat and started for their tent. When in the middle of the lake the motor went wrong and the boat was stopped.

O'Toole picked up a lantern and began an inspection. He put the lantern too near the gasoline tank, which exploded. The concussion and shooting flames burned Campbell and Hallman, who sprang into the lake, but O'Toole, who was badly burned about the arms, stuck to the boat.

Campbell, aged twenty-one, could swim, but was evidently attacked with cramps, for he drowned. Members of the Whelan club rescued Hallman, who was exhausted, having been hit by the boat while in the water.

PREVENTS TRAIN WRECK

Man Runs Two Miles to Tell of Burned Bridge.

Georgetown, Del., Aug. 8.—A crowd of train returning excursionists coming from Rehoboth and Ocean City, Md., were saved from being wrecked when Thomas King, who was walking along the track, discovered that a bridge near Redden had been burned away, leaving a large gap in the track.

King ran the distance of nearly two miles to the Redden depot, where he gave the alarm in time for the train to be held at Georgetown until the wrecking crew could lay a temporary crossing.

The bridge is supposed to have caught fire from a hot cinder which inflamed the dry timber.

SWELL GAMBLING DEN RAIDED

Reformers Descend on Narragansett Club.

SOCIETY WOMEN FAINT

Chief of Police Causes Arrest of Two Raiders For Acting Without a Warrant, and Gamblers Hide Paraphernalia.

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Aug. 8.—A raid on the quarters of the swell Narragansett club at the pier early Sunday morning, made by five reformers headed by Constable John G. Cross, was frustrated by Chief of Police James D. Caswell, of that town.

During the raid the chief blocked the actions of the raiders and later caused the arrest of Constable Cross and George L. Cutting, of Worcester, one of the raiders, on charges of assault. His action in delaying the raiders at first was on the ground that they were raiding without warrants, he says.

The action of the chief was in direct opposition to an order given him by Assistant Attorney General Harry P. Cross, who directed the chief to go to the assistance of Constable Cross and the members of the raiding party.

Constable Cross remained on guard over the gambling instruments in the clubrooms until nearly noon, while everything was done to oust him in order that the machines might be taken away and hidden.

Police Chief Protects Gamblers.

All of these efforts failing, Chief of Police Caswell obtained a warrant for Cross' arrest on a charge of assault and placed the constable under arrest with his own hands. As they left the building the gamblers commenced to remove the state's evidence of gambling, and within fifteen minutes the rooms were as bare as a dance hall floor.

The raid was made as a complete surprise to the club inmates and all others who may have had interests in the matter one way or another. The gamblers, when the raiding party landed in their midst, having pushed by the guards and steel doors, sent post haste for Chief Caswell, and after the latter's arrival things took on a different aspect.

With Constable Cross were James S. Y. Ivins, of New York, a summer resident at the pier; George L. Cutting, of Worcester, Mass., a friend of Mr. Ivins; Constable Samuel Brown and Constable Tenant.

Constable Tenant and Mr. Ivins went through the outside door of the building first and overpowered the guard maintained at the entrance. The other three members of the raiding party went past the guard and upstairs. They were obliged to break down a small door and then found themselves in a foyer. In this place there were about twenty colored waiters hustling about. The raiders pushed through one of two doors which opened on the foyer and found themselves in a sumptuously furnished gambling den. There were about thirty or thirty-six persons in the room, half of them society women in evening gowns.

For a second the presence of the raiders was not noticed. The three roulette wheels were in operation, one faro layout was being patronized and a hazard board was a favorite among the women members of the party. For a minute the raiders watched the gambling going on and then Constable Cross announced himself in the name of the law.

Women Faint.

The scene which greeted this announcement was nearly a panic. Women fainted and others became almost hysterical at the thought of being arrested. There was no fighting, however, among the men. The raiders recognized several women whose names if mentioned would shock the world of society in New York and Philadelphia, as well as other places. Constable Cross announced that he would take the names of all present and allow them to depart.

The gathering was ordered to file out the doors and in passing the constable all gave a name. In the majority of instances fictitious names were given. In some cases Constable Cross and Mr. Ivins knew the people, and so false names are not available.

THE ABANDONED FARM

With about all of the free government land taken up and the hunger of folks for land increasing rather than diminishing, a good deal of interest is being shown by home seekers in some sections in what are known as the abandoned farms found in the New England states, but in larger number in the state of New York. These farms are usually found in hilly sections and comprise tracts which in the beginning never should have been reclaimed from the forest areas of which they were a part or are tracts which originally possessed an agricultural value which has been reduced and depleted as a result of a skimming and robbing system of handling. In some fewer instances these farms, possessing considerable agricultural value, are to be found in localities which are particularly remote and lonesome or at too great a distance from market. Often the neighborhoods in which these farms are found are peopled by folks of an ultra conservative and nonprogressive class, the remnant following a long period in which there has been an exodus of the younger and more progressive members of the community to sections farther west, where agricultural conditions were more inviting. The farms in question still possessing possibility of regeneration and agricultural usefulness have become unproductive as a result of improper handling, which has brought about a poor physical condition of the soil, lack in humus and soil sourness or acidity. A good deal of thought has been devoted to the possibility of reclaiming these abandoned farms, and as a result of these investigations some practical suggestions have been made. One of these investigators is Dean Bailey of the New York experiment station at Cornell, N. Y. He believes that these farms may be used for one of three purposes—the growing of fruit, the revival of animal industries and extension of dairying and for the growing of forests. Properly handled, including the raising of stock and dairying and the application of fertilizers and lime, there is little question that many of these farms could be brought to a satisfactory profit giving back a point in their favor is willingness to large market centers, which will continue to improve as the years go by. Many of these farms will never be reclaimed. Others, however, will be, and are deserving of the careful investigation of the land seeker who may not have a considerable amount to invest.

Mixed.

During a church convention in one of our large cities a lady well known as one of the prominent businesswomen of the land was entertaining at her home a number of ministers, delegates to the convention. The second evening, being very tired, she proposed having two hours to herself while her guests were attending the religious meeting announced. One delegate, however, insisted on keeping her company. They sat for a time before the library fire the minister talking on in a stream, the lady growing more and more sleepy. A cricket was skimming on the hearth, and presently a hymn from the neighboring church reached their ears. The clergyman, slowly rocking, slowly fitting the tips of his fingers to one another, commented, "How sweet the songs of Zion sound on the evening air!"

His hostess, almost asleep, was still responsive. She fancied he was referring to the cricket. "Yes," she replied, "I'm told they do it with their hind legs."—Harper's Weekly.

His Glimpse of War

By R. W. KEENAN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

In 1870, having been just graduated from college, I went abroad to see something of the world before settling to my life work. There was a great deal to see at that time—namely, one of the biggest wars of modern times. The Germans under Von Moltke were marching across the French border. Landing at Cherbourg, I went directly to Paris and, taking letters from the American minister, set out for the front to get a glimpse of war. Having been ten years too late in my birth to take part in our own great struggle in America, I was extremely desirous to witness a similar contest between the French and the Germans.

I was received kindly at the headquarters of Marshal MacMahon, but there were few great battles, and the two nations did not seem disposed to fight one for the benefit of a young American who had come across an ocean to see "the fun." So after remaining for a time with the French I determined to join the Germans. I realized that passing from one army to its opposing one during actual war was a serious business, but I had heard so much of the thrilling episodes of war from friends who had fought in the American contest that my young blood was fired to participate in a similar affair. So, selecting a point between the lines where the French had no outposts, I left them and, walking down a road, was taken in by a Prussian vedette.

This was rather a tame adventure, and I was on the lookout for something more exciting. Though I was not aware of it, something more exciting was on the lookout for me.

I presented my credentials, which were my passport and my letters to the French commanders. I had struck the troops under General Manteuffel, and it was at his headquarters that the documents were examined. I was treated with the utmost civility by the officers of his staff. Indeed, I did not but contrast the attention I received with that of the French officers, who upon the statement of the American minister, vouching for me, permitted me to go pretty much where I pleased, but paid little heed to me. The Prussians showered me with attentions, but I was not permitted to go about at all. Indeed, excuses were made to keep me at headquarters.

One evening General Manteuffel's chief of staff gave a dinner at which were several ladies. I was the guest of honor and was seated beside a very beautiful woman who spoke English with a broken accent. I was young and correspondingly susceptible; therefore it is not surprising that before the evening was spent I had fallen under a spell which, had I been older, I might have seen was purposely thrown over me. Before the party broke up I and this lady were left alone together. Suddenly her manner changed from lightness to intense seriousness.

"I am being watched," she said.

"Watched?"

"Yes; they know my mission."

"What mission?"

"I saw you at MacMahon's headquarters. I was receiving my instructions while you were there. Save me."

"How?"

"They know that MacMahon has sent some one into their lines for information. If you take the risk for a time I will go free. If suspected you can prove that you are an American and will not suffer. I cannot prove that I am not a Frenchwoman. Here is the information I bear. Take it. If they find it on me I die. Keep it for me till the danger is past, then give it to me."

She thrust a little roll of tissue paper upon me. At the moment she did so a

Prussian officer entered, and I had no opportunity to hand it back without being seen. To do so would be equivalent to informing the officer that she was a spy.

But if found with the paper in my possession I would be shot. From that moment I was not for a second free from observation. When we were about to depart the chief of staff came to me and said:

"We move at 2 o'clock. The general will have no one except soldiers with us. We have kept you at headquarters for your own good. You have seen nothing; therefore you may go back whence you came."

Without waiting for a reply he conducted me to the picket line. Glad to go free with the lovely spy's pellet, I walked hastily away. I was followed and arrested. Taken back to General Manteuffel's headquarters, I was searched and the paper found on me. As I was being led away I passed the lady who had given me the paper. The officers were apologizing to her for something, and I heard them tell her carriage was waiting for her.

I was kept under guard till morning when an officer came hurrying toward me. As soon as he reached me he said angrily, "You are a fool!"

"I am at any rate not a spy."

"No; the real spy has gone. We learned that some one was among us and suspected two persons who came in at the same time—this woman and yourself. As soon as the woman had gone beyond our reach she sent us proof that she was in MacMahon's service and had duped you. You will depart for your rear at once."

I had had all of war I wanted and went.

The bee moth is a pest that is likely to lay its eggs in comb honey that is stored and not properly protected, and also does so in hives in which the swarms have made headquarters for too long a time. The super of a hive into which we looked the other evening was literally alive with lusty larvae and the newly hatched moths. When this state of affairs exists the swarm is usually done for, and the moths and larvae should be given a sulphur sauge or a dose of carbon bisulphide by placing a few drops of the chemical on a piece of cotton and inserting it into the entrance to the hive.

With the north pole tagged by Peary and the battle against the air seemingly won, as shown in the remarkable performances of aviators in America and Europe during the past few weeks, there would appear to be little else to achieve along the line of accomplishing the seemingly impossible and wonderful. Yet a large place in public esteem waits for the man who may be able to catch and conserve the sweltering heat of summer for use during the winter season, as we already do with the cold when we store cakes of ice. Experiments have been conducted along this line, but so far they have been without result.

With meat products at a high notch as a result of a scarcity of food animals and with an ever increasing output of gold tending to still further inflate prices, the time would seem to be appropriate for a whole lot of fellows to diversify their agricultural operations by making a start with a flock of sheep. With intelligent care they are easy to raise, while a major part of their keep is furnished by the weeds—the bane and waste byproduct of most every farm. Besides very satisfactory prices which one may expect for mutton, the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, which shoved wool duties to a still higher level, will hardly be changed within a decade, hence good prices may be counted on for the fleece of the flock. To a man up a tree the sheep business looks mighty good for several years to come.

The government Crop Reporter for June contains some very interesting statistics on the fruit situation by states and for the country as a whole. The condition of apples, which outrank in value any other single fruit crop, is placed at 63 per cent as against 61.4 for June, 1909, and 60.8 per cent, which is the ten year average yield. Washington leads with a percentage of 95, Oregon shows 93 per cent, while of other important apple producing states Idaho promises 92 per cent of a normal crop, New York 75, Colorado 58, Michigan 57, Arkansas 50 and Missouri 32 per cent. Iowa was hardest hit of all with the April freezes and shows but 7 per cent of a normal prospect. The estimate on pears for the whole country is placed at 63.2 per cent of a normal crop as compared with 61.8 a year ago, while the prospect for the peach crop is placed at 62 per cent as against 54.1 per cent a year ago.

A Good Investment.

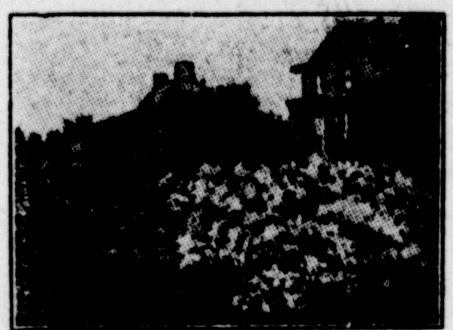

Beautiful home grounds are an investment, just as good fences, drain age, etc., are. They add to the value of the farm and to the happiness of the family.

HOME GROUND ATTRACTIVENESS.

Tends to Refine and Elevate Whole Communities.

They Are the Two Words That Give the Keynote to Success in Arranging Shrubbery and Trees on the Lawn—Laying the Walk is Important.

The home is the center of all that most people hold dear and is one of the best means of attracting visitors and settlers to the town. It is therefore of the highest importance that its surroundings should be such as will have a refining and elevating influence upon the children and young people, as well as upon the whole community. It is not necessary for one to be rich or even well to do in order to enjoy the delights of an attractive home. The writer knows men and women of the most humble stations in life who by a little care and attention to lawn and trees and shrubbery have developed beautiful effects.

When we speak of beautifying the home grounds our first thought is to go immediately to a landscape gardener and turn the whole matter over to him. This will do very well in case you have sufficient means to warrant and also in case you are so situated that you can easily change your present home grounds and make them what a landscape gardener would want.

The object of this article is not to supplant the landscape gardener, for we all owe too much to him to interfere in any way with his calling. But our object is to suggest some way by which it may be possible to supplement what you already have about your home in order to bring out the lines of beauty and charm and make your home a delight and satisfaction to your family and your friends.

If you call in a good landscape gardener his first observation will be the general lay of the ground and size of the lot. Then he will gradually begin to evolve gentle curves and angles, a tree here, certain shrubs there and an open grass plot in front or at the side. In the making of his outlines the landscape gardener may wreck some of your own cherished plans.

Where you may have had some straight and angular road in mind he will advise a gentle curve, and where you may wish to go directly he may choose to lay out the path by a gentle detour which would make possible some splendid effects in shrubbery or trees. If your house is already thickly surrounded by trees he may advise a liberal use of the ax for the health and brightness of the home.

There are three important divisions in all landscape gardening—namely, the house, the lawn and the trees and shrubs. If you are building you will of course lay out your ground and locate your house in such a way as to make it fit in most effectively with your plans for lawn and shrubbery. Too many people build the house first and think about the arrangement of the place afterward. An hour or more with pencil and paper, sketching out your ground from different angles, will mean more in the final outcome than you can easily imagine.

Right here we want to emphasize as strongly as we may that just as surprising results, in a small way at least, can be achieved with a small lot and a cottage as with a mansion on large grounds. It will require more brains to arrange the small lot effectively than the large one.

Simplicity and dignity are the two words that give the keynote to all successful work in the arrangement of the home grounds. After the buildings have been located and the grounds properly graded the next step is to determine the question of driveways and walks.

These must depend very largely upon the nature of the grounds and the convenience of the people using them. It will be found that any attempt to establish a walk around and out of one's way will defeat its own ends, and the lawn will suffer as a result, especially so if the walk is used for practical purposes. This does not necessarily mean that the walk should be laid in a straight line, but that it should start and end at the most natural points.

"BACK TO THE FARM"

IV.—The Modern Farm Home.

By C. V. GREGORY.

(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

ONE of the chief reasons why the girls and women of the farm have occasionally longed in the past for the city is because of the more convenient homes that were found there. Many a farm woman has had her life shortened by carrying water from the well or the spring, bending for hours at a time over steaming washtubs and doing other hard labor from which the women in town long ago were emancipated. Today the modern farm home is fully as well supplied with conveniences as the house in the city, and

CONVENIENCE IN THE FARM HOME—A WASH ROOM IN THE CELLAR.

It is done at less cost. The reason that more homes are not provided with such conveniences is that the farmers have grown used to doing without them. They look forward to retiring and moving to town, where they can have all the modern conveniences. When they get there they will pay dearly for them in the form of house rent. To have them in the country means a direct cash outlay, and too often the farmer pleads that he cannot afford it. A little figuring would convince him that he need not do without a few of these conveniences that make life so much more pleasant for the whole family.

The first consideration in most parts of the country is the heating system. Farmers are getting out of the habit of using stoves, as they are finding that the added convenience of a furnace or hot water heater, together with the saving of coal or wood, will pay for the installation. With a heating system of this kind all the coal and dust incident to building and keeping up the fire are in the cellar. The whole house can be heated for about what it costs to heat two or three rooms with stoves. There is no need of crawling out of bed into a cold room in the morning. A pull on the chain will open the draft, and in half an hour or so the house is warm. The kitchen also can be heated from the cellar, and an oil stove can be used for cooking. An oil stove takes up less room, saves fuel and is much more comfortable to work over in the summer time.

A furnace has the advantage of cheapness. It also furnishes fresh air to the rooms, if properly put in. For an eight room house a furnace can be put in for about $150. A hot water system for the same house would cost a trifle more than twice as much. The hot water system has the advantages of being cleaner and keeping a more uniform heat. Cheap coal will work well in the boiler, thus considerably reducing the expense for fuel.

The next consideration is the water system. A good water supply under pressure is not only a convenience, but also a form of insurance, since each farm must furnish its own fire protection. Some farm buildings are built now of concrete and hollow tile, but even then there is always some danger of fire. An elevated tank is one of the best means of supplying pressure. Some of the modern types of silos are being built with a tank on top. A method that is as convenient, though a little more expensive, is a pneumatic tank in the cellar. The water is pumped into this and the air inside compressed. The air pressure will lift the water to all parts of the house. For power to pump the water a windmill may be used, or a hydraulic ram if running water is obtainable. The most reliable power is a gasoline engine. Nearly every really up to date modern farm has its gasoline engine, which can easily be made to combine pumping with its other duties. With a little added expense the water system can be made double, so that both hard and soft water can be obtained. For the bathroom and the kitchen sink hot water is needed also, which can be provided by a heater in the range or by a separate oil heater.

With a good water system installed the work of the housewife is reduced

50 per cent. Cold and hot water, either hard or soft, is always at hand for use in the kitchen. The dishes can be piled into the sink and washed in almost half the time it took previously. A wash room with permanent tubs can be provided in the cellar. The washing machine can be run with the gasoline engine or with a water motor. While a room of this kind may not make washing exactly a pleasure, it will reduce the labor more than half. With a little planning a small tank can be arranged in the kitchen, so that all the water that is pumped for the stock will pass through it. This is almost as good as an icebox.

A good bath and toilet room is a great convenience to all the family. A shower bath in one corner of the barn will be greatly appreciated by the boys at the close of a hot day's work. The wastes from the kitchen sink and from the wash room can be run into a tile and taken away. For the wastes from the toilet room a sewage disposal plant will have to be provided. The most convenient method is the septic tank. This is an underground cement lined brick tank divided into two compartments. As one compartment fills it overflows into the next. Nearly all the solid substance will be destroyed by bacteria, and the water that flows out at the lower end can be disposed of through a tile drain. The entire cost of a water system such as the one described, with the compressed air tank, together with the sewage disposal plant, need not be much more than $250.

The cheapest method of lighting the farmhouse is by acetylene gas. This gas is generated by a machine in the cellar and can be piped to all the rooms and to the barn. If desired it can be used also for cooking. The average cost of installing an acetylene plant is about $200. This includes lights in the barn and in the yard. It costs little to run an acetylene plant after it is once in. The average cost is about a cent for a sixteen candle power light for four hours. Acetylene is the nearest like daylight of any kind of artificial light and is incomparably better than the old fashioned oil lamp. The newer types of acetylene lamp are provided with a battery, so that they can be lighted by merely turning a button.

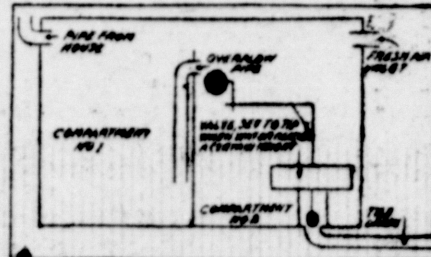

By going to a little more expense electric light can be had on the farm. If a gasoline engine is already at hand the total cost of installing an electric plant, with lights in house and barn, need not be more than $375.

A few electric fans will make the house comfortable in hot weather. One convenience of the city, ice, is still lacking. The way the ice problem is most satisfactorily handled in the country is for half a dozen neighbors to build a co-operative icehouse. The men club together and fill it in the winter, and a plentiful supply of ice is at hand all through the summer. With a small additional expense a cold storage room can be built in connection with the icehouse for keeping meat, poultry, eggs and fruit. In a number of communities co-operative fresh meat societies are successfully run. The members take turns killing a beef or a hog, and fresh meat is supplied all through the year at much less cost than it could be obtained in the city.

The cost of a heating system, a wash room, a vacuum cleaner, a hot water attachment and other devices of that sort is the same in the country as in the city. The cost of the water and sewage system in the country is about $250. The cost of operating a water system in the country is much less than the cost of city water.

An electric lighting system for the farm will cost from $375 up. The life of such a system can be figured safely at twenty years. The storage batteries will not last so long, but the rest of the apparatus will last longer. This would mean an annual depreciation of $18.75. Interest at 6 per cent would amount to $22.50. The cost of operating the plant will depend, of course, on the amount of electricity used. The cost for lighting the average farmhouse and barn for a year and furnishing electricity for sundry other purposes will not average more than $10 for gasoline. This makes the total cost for electricity $41.25 a year. In the city the average cost for electricity for an eight room house is about $60 a year.

The cost of an icehouse and of putting up ice varies so much with conditions that it is hard to give any general figures. These can easily be obtained for any particular locality, however. It is seldom that ice put up in this manner costs as much in the country as in town.

The farm home can be fitted with hot water heat, hot and cold water, bath and toilet room, electric lights, wash room in the cellar, etc., for $1,000. The interest on $1,000 is $60 a year. Ten per cent for depreciation and repairs is $100 a year. The saving in coal will pay for the cost of running the lighting and water systems. For $100 a year the farm home can be provided with every modern convenience that the city home possesses.

By using a furnace and an acetylene system the annual cost can be lowered to about $85. The city man pays that extra $7 to $14 a month and more in increased rent and thinks nothing of it. The farmer is beginning to realize that it is possible for him to live better, and he is rapidly taking advantage of the opportunity.
